Merging layers Layers in an image are stacked on top of each other. By default, layers are in a normal stacking order, left to right. However, some kinds of images, such as a layer of a rotated bevel and a layer of a sketch, can be adjusted to stack the layers in another order. To do this, select the layers and use the dialog box that appears, shown in Figure 13-9. Figure 13-9: The Merge Layers dialog box enables you to adjust the stacking order of layers in a multilayer image. To change a layer's stacking order, open the Layers dialog box by selecting Layer > Layers, or by pressing Ctrl+L. You can rearrange layers as many times as you like by pressing Ctrl+L and then clicking the down and right arrow keys.

Q: How can I call a service from a view in my Opencart module? I have the following structure:
/opencart/www/app/controller/module/module.php /opencart/www/app/model/module/module.php /opencart/www/includes/common.php I want to call a controller function like this from a view: $data['mainframe']->list_module($cust_id); When I try to access the server through my browser, I get an error like this: Fatal error: Call to undefined method myModuleClass::list_module() in /opencart/www/includes/application.php on line 187 I must say that I have the controller and model classes correctly. A: You have defined your function in module.php, that's why you are getting the error. You need to define your function in controller.php or application.php. If that function is common to all controllers then you can put it in application.php $data['list_module'] = array( 'callback' => 'list_module', 'permission' => 'validate'); and define a new method in module.php for e.g. list_module() public function list_module() { // code } Then you can use it wherever in your views. Ripon College Ripon College may refer to: In the United Kingdom: Ripon College Cuddesdon, a Social Networking Censorship and Public Honesty Social networks are a great way for users to share pictures, movies, music, text, and more. However, even though the laws against it are not as strict as they once were, social networking sites continue to be blocked by a majority of countries. Many of the countries that prevent Facebook, Twitter, and other social media sites are dictatorships, right-wing regimes, and religious groups. These groups do this to prevent any sort of political discussion.

Although social media is utilized often for radical political action, their outright banning is not the only reason for this. In fact, there are countries that block sites like Twitter because, like everything else, it contains too much vulgarity. In most countries that still allow for social media, there are some restrictions. For example, there are certain times you may not be able to access sites like Facebook.
These times, such as during sporting events, can vary from country to country. For example, in the United States, Facebook and Twitter are entirely unblocked. However, in most countries, they are blocked during the night time, which is just before the middle of the night. This is to prevent citizens from freely discussing anything related to politics. Overall, there are too many countries that are trying to prevent the spread of online information. This is problematic because, just like in the physical world, people need to be able to freely discuss their opinions. However, all it takes is one bad government to block an entire country from using the internet! Thus, while one person may be willing to work around any nation-wide restrictions, this is certainly not acceptable or even possible for others. Tags: Share: Recent Videos Free Ebook Download: How to Create a Website from Scratch
